

The 2020 CB Madan Awards committee is pleased to announce the 8th CB Madan Prize Recipient

The Post-Doctoral Legal Scholars of the University of Nairobi's School of Law for their "Commitment and outstanding scholarly contribution To Constitutionalism and the rule of law in Kenya"

C.B. Madan Prize Citation for the Post-Doctoral Legal Scholars of the University of Nairobi's School of Law

As the bedrock of just and peaceful societies, the rule of law has played a significant role in elevating Africa to the status of the world's most rapidly growing economic region. Apart from bringing about economic transformation, the rule of law has been instrumental in influencing social and political transformation on the continent. Over the last fifty years, the University of Nairobi's School of Law has been part of this transformation through the training of more than 12,000 lawyers who continue to play a central role in safeguarding the rule of law in Kenya and abroad. More than 123 of these lawyers have advanced in their studies and attained Doctor of Philosophy degrees (PhDs) either from their alma mater or from other distinguished law schools across the world. These has sharpened their skills and opened multiple pathways of public or non-governmental service through which they continue to shape the next generation of scholars, practitioners and global leaders. While we have lost some of these leading luminaries, those that remain among us, including those who currently or in the past have taught at Kenya's premier law faculty, continue to influence the trajectory of legal discourse in the country and beyond. It is these post-doctoral legal scholars whose basic (Bachelor of Laws) legal education was obtained from the University of Nairobi who are, collectively, the recipients of the 8th C.B. Madan Prize for the year 2020.

The recipients of the award exemplify the characteristics of C.B. Madan who has been hailed as the best Judge and Chief Justice that Kenya has ever had due to his brilliance and independence, his sense of justice and deep understanding of the law, and – above all - his respect for the rule of law. The post-doctoral legal scholars we honour today have been at the forefront in ensuring that they not only impart knowledge of the law required in professional practice, business, and government, but they also undertake transformative work across the globe. They have maintained a distinctive character in contribution to the legal profession and the legal fraternity in Kenya and are the leading source of legal knowledge and skills in the country.

At the local level, the post-doctoral scholars have made significant contributions to the rule of law by serving as academics in various public and private universities, as senior legal officers, as senior members of government, as legislators and technical staff of Parliament, as Magistrates and Judges of Superior Courts, and as members and technical experts of key constitutional bodies, including the Kenya Constitutional Review Commission, the Committee of Experts on Constitutional Review, the Commission for the Implementation of the Constitution, the Truth Justice & Reconciliation Commission, the Kenya Law Reform Commission and the Judicial Service Commission.

Their ground breaking work in support for the rule of law has been felt beyond the borders of Kenya through their contributions to the work of a variety of international organisations, including: the International Criminal Court, the International Finance Corporation, the United States Department of Defence, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the United Nations Environment Programme, the Global Campus of Human Rights, the European Inter-University Centre for Human Rights and Democratisation (EIUC), the International Centre for Not for Profit Law (USA), the UN Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Peaceful Assembly & Association, the African Union, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, the African Centre for Strategic Studies (USA), the Centre for International Criminal Justice (Africa), the African Peer Review Mechanism, and the East Africa Law Society. The scholars, in their distinguished service, have traversed various disciplines in public and private law. Their scholarly influence and setting trends in legal philosophy is notable across the fields of international law, human rights, constitutional law, environmental law, corporate governance, governance, family law, commercial law, to mention a few out of a potentially non-exhaustible list.

The post-doctoral legal scholars we celebrate today can trace their background to the University of Nairobi's School of Law which was founded in the late 1960s as the Department of Commercial Law in the Faculty of Commerce. It was constituted into a fully-fledged Faculty of Law in 1970 and has evolved steadily from the small department to its current status as a hub of legal scholarship and a champion provider of legal education in East and Central Africa. We are also glad to note that many of the post-doctoral legal scholars are active members of the School's Alumni Chapter who continue to support the School's programmes and activities in various ways. The School, which marks its 50th Anniversary this year, has a range and depth of expertise in various fields of legal scholarship, with more than 40 members of its staff being holders of PhDs in law. We congratulate the post-doctoral legal scholars of the University of Nairobi's School of Law for this outstanding achievement.

Even as we celebrate these scholars, we are mindful of the fact that the rule of law is constantly under threat in nations across the globe, and this calls for legal scholars to engage continuously with other stakeholders to safeguard and cement the rule of law. Closer home, we are currently going through a contentious constitutional moment as we mark the 10th year since the promulgation of the Constitution of Kenya 2010. Millions of Kenyans are looking up to these scholars and the rest of us in the legal fraternity to offer a voice of reason and a candid informed assessment of the proposals that have been made.

There are endless opportunities for post-doctoral scholars in academia, in the private sector, in public service, and in national and international non-governmental organizations, and we hope this award will inspire current law students and other young lawyers to advance their studies and to pick up the baton in this never-ending race towards a just, peaceful and truly democratic society governed by the rule of law.
